Event Breakdown:

Event: Stanford Mock Trial High School Symposium

An annual day-long symposium of seminars and guest speakers to hone the skills of mock trial participants at the high school level. Over the previous three years, around 15 local high schools have attended annually, bringing a total of about 150 students each year. This event also serves to recruit new talent for the Stanford team, and it is open to all Stanford students.

Event: Los Angeles Invitationals

This invitational competition is held during the beginning of winter quarter each year at UCLA, and every year we bring all of our teams to compete. Around 30 mock trial teams participate in a series of four trials set up like a real competition but which doesn't count towards the national championship for the year. Our participation in this competition in the past has significantly strengthened our program because it gives each member, but especially the freshmen, experience with collegiate mock trial. There are no qualifications for students to attend this tournament except that they join the Stanford Mock Trial team.

Event: Portland Pacific Northwestern Regional Competition

The Portland Regional Competition is the tournament that qualifies us for all future competitions. 20 schools from the Pacific Northwest come to the University of Portland and based on how they place there, the top three go straight to Iowa, the next best three go to Florida, and the next best three go to Minnesota. There are no qualifications for students to attend this competition except that they join the Stanford Mock Trial team.

GL Code:	Explanation/Itemization:	Total Budgeted:	Requested from students:

Event: St. Petersburg Silver Track National Competition

If one of our teams places in the second-best bracket at Portland (which our B or C team usually does each year), then they qualify for the silver track nationals in Florida. 60 teams participate in this tournament in two separate divisions. Last year, the Stanford A team placed first out of both divisions and earned a bid to continue to Iowa.

Event: Des Moines Gold Track National Competition

The Gold Track National Competition in Des Moines, Iowa, is the final competition for collegiate mock trial. About 50 teams compete after placing within the top few teams of their respective regional competitions around the country, or placing within the top few teams at the silver track competitions in Florida or Minnesota. Last year, we placed within the top ten teams in the entire country at this competition.
